a Good Dinner.

There were certain Christmas celebrations in New York last night which suggested light flashed into dark cellars. These were the dinners and entertainments furnished by the missions whose work is salvaging shattered men. Muise, warm food, geniality-all these things—were a momentary gleam in lives gloomy through misfortune, weakness, drink, crime. While observing the play of Christmas spirit in these harers for battered men, one could not escape the contrast presented by a single evening of cheer in dull and hopeless existences.

The hospitality of the missioners was a lighted candle briefly illuminating dark souls, suggesting incredible tragedies and pitiful misfortunes. In the long lines of men that came with shuffling feet and downcast eyes to receive baskets or boxes of Christmas food, one discerned individuals that have been punished by every misery the world holds. They had crept into the light for a few

They had crept into the light for a few-hours of happiness (or forgetfulness) be-fore returning to their past—for most of them have neither present nor future. At 8 o'clock last night there were 1,000 such crowding at the door of the Bow-ery Mission in the Bowery near Riving-ton street. One scarcely needed the rapid comment of the mission brother, who stood a little way liside the door and pointed out this man and that to read the stories that lay back of he Bopeless eyes. In five cases out of seven hopeless eyes. In five cases out of sever drink was the special devil.

None Real Hungry.

It did not appear that many in the ne that passed through the door to take their turn at the wicket and there receive a box containing two sandthere re-ceive a box containing two sandtheres, an apple and three doughnuts and their cup of steaming coffee were actually hungry as men sometimes come to know hunger. It seemed, indeed, as if most were there to break the monotony of existence: to break the monotony of existence; to eatch the feeling of by gone days when they too went about among clean, strong men, provided Christmas trees for children, knew what it was to faugh from mirthful hearts and had plans for coming days.

Although the distribution of the baskets did not begin until 11 A. M. there was a line of women, some very thinly clad and holding their shawls closely about their shoulders, waiting at the door.
